SKIING 2012

Montgenèvre, France

21st to 28th Jan.

Dear Parents,

Ok, so time to try again, £1250 for Switzerland was too much, so here is another option. An old favourite of ours, with the hotel right on the piste. £850, flying from our beloved Gatwick

Where:

Montgenèvre, France (on the French/Italian border)
www.montgenevre.com

Montgenèvre is an old stone village perched on the col separating France from Italy between Briançon and Turin. It is France's only village included in the Milky Way ski circuit. There used to be a main road going through the village in-front of the hotel, but recently they have diverted this through a tunnel in the mountain.

There are many reasons why I have skied here so many times in the past. It's the highest non purpose built ski resort in the Alps, they get 300 days of sunshine a year & yet the slopes are some of the most snowsure in the region. It's really easy to ski over to Italy & enjoy a Italian culture as well as the French. The location of the hotel is fabulous, sat in the sun metres from the ski piste.
